The Kings Majeſties Speech to the Lords for the raiſing of Forces to maintaine the peace and ſafety of His Subjects.

My Lords,

THe laſt time I was in this place I minded you to make what ſpeed you could to raiſe Forces to reduce the tyraniſing people, which will not obey my command to a Loyall ſubjection, the ſame I ſhall now include, for I above all things in the world prize the peace and ſafety of my good Subjects, and of all Rebellion I hate that of the Popiſh Faction, I heare daily of the woefull eſtate of my People, and doe underſtand how my Houſe of Commons have passed a Bill for the raising of Forces, and that the Bill stickes with you my Lords, for whach I give you no thanks, as to the Declaration, I have no pleasure in that, but that Actions may be transacted, in matter of such consequence, this is the full effect of the Speech.

The Report made by Master Pym.

Still doe the Protestants eccho forth lameetable complaints, and as it were dispaire of safety, for it was reported to the committe for Irish affaires, that that more Counties have collected their Forces, and joyne with the Rebels,

They are marched within 4. Miles of Dublin, pillaging of Houses, and driving away Cattell, and stop the passages from whence they received provision, to the great griefe and feare of his Majesties good Subjects, the Protestants of Ireland, the Rebels made publique proclemation, and maintained it, with a generall Oath for to be all true to the Church of Rome. allso they proclaime and confesse that King Charles is their lawfull King and governour, making a Vow and Protestation.

They tooke up Armes in defence of their Religion, not in contempt or malice against his Maiesty, to which intent they spake to the Lord Dillon, to send Letters to the Kings Maiesty, but this can be no better dissemblation, for they which love the King will not persecute his Loyall people by fire and Sword, as they have and daily doe, and yet will make us believe they love the King, from their power Lord keepe him for ever, and never let him be so unfortunate as to fall into their hands, for then upon my life I am perſwaded they would exile from their hearts both duty, love, and mercy, two Sunnes muſt not ſhine in one climate, Tyrone muſt have nothing to doe where King Charles hath Authority.

Although now he exalt himſelfe as his Father did before him, let him quickly returne to his Spaniſh preferment, from England, Scotland, or Ireland.

Other Letters came that the Rebels expected Ammunition from forraigne parts, that the old Proverbe may be made true, the Devill helpes his ſervants.

Wherefore the Lord chiefe Iuſtices of Ireland, deſired the Parliament to ſend their poore Subjects and friends ſome reliefe of Men and Money, about which there did ariſe ſome debate concerning ſending of men out of this Kingdome, I meane alſo concerning a preſſe unleſſe it was done by Act of Parliament, but now it is reſolved upon on the Queſtion that ayd ſhall be ſpeedily ſent unto the poore afflicted Proteſtants in IRELAND, the Commanders in London looke every day when their Commiſſion ſhould be ſealed up, and then they enter into pay.

A Conſpiracy diſcovered againſt the High Court of Parliament.

VPon the 17. of June, Mr. Fines made a Report to the Honourable Court, that there was a great Treaſon diſcovered againſt them, the Plotters whereof were, firſt. That Captaine Goring ſhould be a great Commander in the Army, and the Lord of Newcaſtle to meet them in Nottinghamſhire with 1000 Horſe. In which Conſpiracy Sergeant Major Wallis ſaith, That the French would aſſiſt them, and the Clergie would at their own charge ſend 1000 horſe, this Army was to be brought from the North against the Honourable Houses of Parliament. As it was Reported to both Houses by Mr. Hambden.

A Letter sent from the Queenes Court in Holland, sent from Mr. Cayn her Maiesties Servant, to Mr. Sanders neere Cheering-Crosse.

SIR,

I Having such a fit opportunity to present my Service unto you not knowing when to have the same again by reason of the great distempers which are with you. Therefore I thought by this Messenger to certifie you of the proceedings betwixt the Queens Majesty, and her Royall Soveraign the King of great Brittain. Upon the 22. of June there went to the King at York, Prince Robert, Prince Maurice, the Lord Dunby, Sir Edward Stradly, Sir Lewes Dues, Mr. Smith, Mr. Whaley, Mr. Foxe. Mr. Bacon, Mr. Grand, Mr. Geffery, Captaine Gade, Captaine Bankly, the which were commanded by the States of Holland to present a Message to His Royall Majesty of great Britain, intimating the great danger which is like to ensue, unlesse he be pleased to decide to his Parliament, and so agree in Concord, and unity together. So I rest.

From the Hague Your loving Friend,
June, 28. 1642. John Cayne.

Servant to the Queens most Excellent Majestie.
